AT THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA.

Thrilling Adventures of a Diver who Visited the Oneida.

On the 24th day of February the "borrowed" steamship Aroostook, with Charles and J. S. Lougee, practical and experienced divers from San Francisco, went to where the Oneida lies in 123 feet of water. After the usual preparations had been concluded, and, by sounding, it had been ascertained that the deck of the Coneida res 103 feet beneath the surface of the oneida was 103 feet beneath the surface of the bay, after every caution had been given to eight strong sailors to keep the air pump constantly in motion, and allow not an instant of time of stoppage to occur, as thereby depended the life of the bold diver; after Charley Lougee had been heimeted and shut from the air, except that supplied through the slender tube of colled rubber, with a life-line around his body and leaden clogs to his feet; with "good-bye" and "God bless you" from all aboard, he was dropped over the side and slowly disappeared in the blue waves, while a nervous tremor shot through our frame as we realized the fearful risk undertaken by that man who was seeking for truth in over one hundred feet of water. Oneida was 103 feet beneath the surface of the seeking for truth in over one hundred feet of water.

Away to the leeward, borne by tide and wind, came floating bubbles to the surface—life-signals from below. The men at the pump were laboring manfully, but becoming fatigued, attempted to change for fresh hands, and there was a stop. "Great God! you will murder my brother! Quick! for Heaven's sake, quick!" And as the men recommenced the revolutions of the air-pump, the elder Lougee, with blanched face and trembling lip, gave a signal on the life-line below. For an instant there came no response, and the face of that rether seemed to turn to marble; but then we saw two-quick motions from the submarine station, and knew it was the welcome signal of "all right," and then Lougee turned to the men at the wheel, who came so near sending both below, and simply said: "My only brother's life depends upon your efforts in keeping that pump in motion—stop again at your peril!" The eaim face and passionate eye told these men not to stop again, and with Lieutenant Tanner close by, they kept at work until stepped by orders from liougee.

they kept at work until stepped by orders from Lougee.

Meantime, when we were on the deck of that "sand-pan," counting the tedbus moments which lengthened to half an hour, Charley Lougee was searching the Onelda at the tremendous depth mentioned. At last came the signal for "surface," and instantly the life line was put in motion; slowly came the coiling hemp and rubber on deck; and at last, sway in the deep blue waves, came in sight the diver, shrouded and panopiled in welrd garments. As he came to the surface, he reached Minister DeLong a sword and lacquered box, then was his helmet loosened, and our party crowded around to hear of the gallant ship. Among our party were many of the survivors of the Onelda; among them were William Crowninshield, Captan Clark, Master Yates, and Dr. James Suddards, who were intensely axcited to learn the tidings.

Baid the diver: "The water for the first seventy feet was quite clear, as the sun gave excellent light, and although my sapply of air was once checked for an instant, I reached the deck of the ship just astern of the mizzenmant, and close by the mess-room hatch; the was once checked for an instant, I reached the deck of the ship just astern of the mizzenmant and close by the mess-room hatch; the tide was ebbing quite strong, and I was compelled to hold to the lines from the rigging to reper from being swept forward. I first examined the side of the ship; she was cut from the mizzen rigging (at an angle of about forty degrees) across the whole stern of the ship, her timplers, far below the water-line, being degrees) across the whole stern of the ship, her timbers, far below the water-line, being crushed and broken, the captain's cabin cut in two, the wheel and stearing gear all carried away, and, in fact, the whole side and end of the ship stove in and cut away. The ship is heading southwest, and sits upright on the bottom, and is making sand slowly. I laid down on the deck and peered over the broken end into the cabin, but did not dare trust my air-line in contact with the jagged timbers. The guns and armament, except one, are all in place aft; but I did not go forward, as I was afraid of entanglement in the rigging." Turning to Crowulnshield, he said: "Your evidence, which I read, described almost exactly the injury, except that she was cut deeper than you could have known." Lougee expressed you could have known." Lougee expresses the belief that it will be impracticable to raise the ship, but that the splendid battery, personal effects, &c., can be saved if the govern-sonal effects, &c., can be saved if the government sees proper.

By this survey the testimony of the living is verified, and the memory of the dead without a stain, for the position of the ship as found, and the positions of both the Oneida and Bombay, as testified to by the navigating officers, show that it was impossible for the captain of the Bombay to have ever seen the red light of the Oneida, and that the order of "port your helm," by Captain Eyre, was wrong, and the "starboard, hard a-starboard" of Master Yates was right.—Correspondence Bacramento Bee. of Master Tates was right.—Correspo

THE DISGRACEFUL DEBATE OVER THE DIPLO-MATIC APPROPRIATION BILL.

St. Demingo, the Pope and New England Witches in the Ring.

A Washington dispatch, of Thursday last, to the New York Herald, says:

A Washington dispatch, of Thursday last, to the New York Herald, says:

Since the counting of the electoral vote for President and Vice-President, in February, 1869, no scene of excitement has been witnessed in the House equal to that of to-day on the debate upon the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill. Judge Kelsey, of New York, who has charge of the bill, opened with a general statement and explanation of its provisions, in which he pointed out several supposed extravagancies of the State Department, which the committee had cut down. There was no excitement, however nothing beyond an ordinary interest. In: Mr. Kelsey's speech. General Banks, who was allowed fifteen minutes, improved his time to put in a strong argument in favor of St. Domingo, and the general-policy of the acquisition of territory in every direction. He warmed the House into a glowing heat on the questions of St. Domingo, Cuba, the West India Islands generally and Canada. When Banks had nearly finished, Logan, of Illinois, made a point of order which proved to be a raid upon the St. Domingo treaty. The chairman of the committee of the whole was Ingersoll, of Illinois, a natural wag. As soon as he perceived the drift of Logan's remarks he railed him out of order. "Well," said Logan, "I guess I had better take my seat." With the utmost gravity the chair replied, "The point of order of the gentleman from Illinois is well taken," and Logan dropped into his seat amid a general roar of laughter.

When the general details of the bill came to be considered, James Brooks, of New York, of laughter.

When the general details of the bill came to be considered, James Brooks, of New York, moved to insert $7500 salary of a minister resident to Rome. This was the signal for the most animated debate of the session, or, indeed, of the present Congress. Mr. Brooks followed up his amendment by a few pertinent remarks, relative to the necessity of our having a mission at Rome, and denunciatory of the act of Congress cutting off that mission. He said nothing, however, of religion or relious faith.

Mr. Dawes, of Massachusetts, followed Brooks in opposition to the amendment. He made some severe strictures on the Catholic Church, and alluded to Brooks as the head centre of the Know-Nothing party in 1852. At this point Mr. Brooks arose to reply, but Dawes would not admit of interruption. The Democratic side of the House became intensely Dawes would not admit of interruption. The Democratic side of the House became intensely excited while Dawes was speaking. Every few seconds some Democrat would rise to reply to Dawes, and as Dawes would not give way the chairman's gavel was kept constantly hammering on the desk to preserve order. Order, however, was utterly out of the question. The war meetings of Tammany and Mozart were thrown completely into the shade. A firemen's club would have been a dignified hody compared to the House. As Dawes pro-A firemen's club would have been a dignified body compared to the House. As Dawes proceeded he became more and more offensive. What excited the Democrats was that the gentleman from Massachusetts persistently refused to yield for either question or explanation. He continued to denounce the Catholic Church and the Democratic party in the most bitter terms.

Mr. Bingham obtained the floor after Mr. Mr. Bingham obtained the floor after Mr. Dawes, though a dozen Democrats were claiming it at once. Bingham is an old-fashioned covenanter Presbyterian. No partisan of the Duke of Argyle of the sixteenth century sould have been more bitterly sectarian. He rehearsed the story of the authorities of Rome compelling the Protestants to worship outside of the walls of the sacred city during the advent of Minister King, and animadverted upon what he called the intolerance of the Roman Catholic Church. He alluded to the Geumenical Council and its action in sustaining the doctrine of the infallibility of the Pope. ing the doctrine of the infallibility of the Pope. This he denounced as an outrage upon the liberty of conscience of mankind, and an attempt to the control of the control

This he denounced as an outrage upon the liberty of conscience of mankind, and an attempt to reduce the human mind to a condition of slavery.

Voorhees, of Indiana, followed Bingham. This was the first show the Democrats had had in the debate since it became interesting and exciting. Voorhees is one of the most interesting and impressive speakers on the Democratic side. He first of all paid his respects to Dawes, and alluded to the sectarian, bigoted character of the New England States. He twitted Dawes upon the State of Massachasetts burning witches, and compelling Quakers and other religious denominations to leave the State. The Puritanism of New England had outstripped the Intolerance of Rome in its worst days. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Bingham) had made this a spiritual question. He had ignored the subject matter under consideration, and had gone off into a raid upon the Roman Catholic Church and the Democratic party.

He had Ignored the subject matter under consideration, and had gone off into a raid upon the Roman Catholic Church and the Democratic party.

John Covode, who figured in the debate on this question a year ago, treated the House to a general raid on the Catholic Church. He accused that denomination of all manner of crimes, and quoted Scripture ad libitum. Sam Cox defended the Irish naturalized citizens, and made a good deal of fin at Covode's expense, keeping the House in a continual roar of laughter. Hoar, of Massachusetts, came to the defence of that State. In the course of his remarks he accused the Democratic party of burning orphan asylums in New York. At this point Voorhees, of Indiana, rose excitedly in his seat, and called "Order! order!" adding, "what the gentleman states is false, and he knows it to be false!" Here there was an indescribable scene of disorder. Every member in the House was on his feet, each one shouting at the top of his voice. The chairman kept his gavel going like a ponderous trip-hammer, and amid his rapping and the shouting of the members the confusion was complete. At last, after much hammering of the gavel and more shouting of the members, Stevens, of New Hampshire, made his voice heard, and demanded that the objectionable words of Voorhees be taken down. The chairman endeavored to make himself heard, but it was useless. The scene of confusion increased. The gavel's raps upon the Speaker's desk became louder and louder and resounded through the hall and out in the corridors. Speaker Blaine now took a station near the chairman and began to prompt him. Ingersoll, however, was unfit for such an emergency. He is a good, jolly fellow, fond of a joke and of fun, and rather participated in the excitement on the floor. When he called the committee to order members only laughed at him and he laughed in return. Finally, by the vigorous use of the gavel, he succeeded in drowning all other voices but his own. The official reporter was directed to write out the objectionable words of Voorhees write out the objectionable words of voltdess and to hand them to the clerk. While he was doing this several Democrats were trying to speak, but they were drowned out with cries of order from the Republican side of the House. Sam Cox insisted that the remarks of Hoar should also be taken down, as they were equally objectionable. Then there was another cry of order, mingled with calls of "Sit down!" "Dry up!" "Keep on your own side!" The words uttered by Yoorhees were at last read from the clerk's desk. The chairman ruled that they were "not Parliamentury, but decidedly pungent." This set the House into a roar of laughter, followed by clapping of hands on both sides. The chairman himself laughed, while round after round of applause went up from the floor. In the midst of this excitement the committee arose and the House adjourned without deciding the question of the mission to Rome.

"I suppose so," murmured the Guardsman; and then he laughed a hard bitter laugh—a laugh not good to hear, a laugh that toid of many a hard death-dealing blow.

He smoked his scented eigarette out—out until it burnt his lips; and then, and not till then, he lighted another.

Ah! and has it not happened so before? Was not Cesar a woman in disguise—was not Hercules? Yes, when Hannibal called his Romans about him, and pointed the way to home, the Red Sea-washed Carthage, was he not, think you sorry for the poor blind poet of Sparts? CHAPTER III. -THE NEW CURATE.

The clergyman smiled at the retort, and quoted a text from Holy Scripture.
"I cannot say I agree with you," said Mrs. Goodchild, "although my dear Henry is not always so regular as he might be. Have you heard what he did only last Sunday, Mr. Pear-ton?"

"No, to tell the truth, I've not," replied the

"No, to tell the truth, I've not," replied the minister with a smile.
"Well, then, I will tell you," said Mrs. Good-child, her eyes absolutely sparking with fun and merriment. "He actually walked behind them as if he were their schoolmaster! Oh, he is such a rogue!"

The clergyman laughed heartily at the anecdote, and after wishing the amusing rattle good day, proceeded to his Bible class.

Little Hazeldean was a charming village. There were tiny bees humming in the gardens near wee wee cottages, and each of these wee wee cottages had a dainty little cupboard—such a tiny, lovely, charming little cupboard, covered with pure white paint, and guarded by a beautiful new lock. Let us enter one of these little cupboards and see what it contains. First, we have a set of tea-things, with a pretty little design upon each article, executed in Look over yonder at the bridge, with its procession of Chinese and the pagoda, and the two sweet little birds in the corner. Easing one another as little birds should. The design is knewn in England as the "willow pattern," and is almost too exquisitely besuiful for description. Then we have large, round pots containing 'jam." a sort of preserved fruit, and some blacklead in cakes, and yellow "soap" (used with water on Sundays for washing purposes) in pounds, and a fine, large, handsome Bible. But, there—I am forgetting the clergyman all this while.

When he arrived in the school-room he called a curly-headed lad up to him and questioned him upon the creation of the world, &c. Ke was answered well in every case.

New York Naval Stores Market. From the Journal of Commerce, of the 21st in-stant: The market for spirits turpentine has a little steadler tone, with the stock here greatly reduced from the business of the past few days. Some 1200 bbis have been taken for shipment within a day or two, the price of which we did not learn. The market elosed at 400 for merchantable lots, with 75 bbis sold at this price. Rosins. The market is very strong for strained grades, with a full lot dimicult to obtain for less than $2 15; there have been a few shipping orders on the market; sales are 5000 bbis strained on private terms, but reported at about $2 12; 250 bbis No 1 at $3; we quote at $2 15 for strained; $2 25a2 60 for No 2; $2 75a4 for No 1; $4 25a6 50 for pale. Tar is in large stock and difficult to sell, with prices very variable; ordinary Wilmington is offered at $2, although selections are held higher.

From the Daily Bulletin, 21st instant: Receipts of rosin 56 bbis. The late decline in spirits turpentine has led to a large business for export; the sales amount to about 1250 bbis at 40a41c for Southern, and 41a42c for New York bbis, merchantable and shipping order, with jobbing parcels at 42%a43c. Rosins have also been active for export, and close firmer; the sales embrace 4800 bbis good strained at or about $2 15, and 300 bbis No.1 at $3. Tar continues duil, and we reduce quotations, there being no buyers for whole parcels at above our inside prices.

From the Journal of Commerce: The market is very firm. There is a fair call from the grocers, and very little stock offering. We quote domestic at 7½a7½c. Sales 100 tcs. In Rangoon there is a small business doing, in lots to the trade, at 7c currency. New York Rice Market.

is a small business doing, in lots of currency.

From the Tribune: The stock is firmly held but the demand is moderate, and we have only to report sales of small lots of Carolina at 7a7½c.

From the World: Holders stiff in their views, but the market at the moment almost entirely at a stand. Carolina 6¾a7½c for common to good, and 7¾a7½c for fancy.

From the Times: Rice continues quiet at former prices; Carolina $7a7 75; Rangoon $2.87½a3 12½ gold, in bond, $106 lbs.

Russell, one of our careful and intelligent Pharmaceutists and Apothecaries, has submitted to my examination the formula for the preparation of a Soothing Cordial prepared and vended by him. vended by him.

It affords me pleasure to express a favorable opinion of its safe and efficient adaptation to the particular cases of the diseases of children, which particular cases of the cities of the cities designed to relieve.

E. GEDDINGS, M. D.

Having had occasion to prescribe Russell.'s Soothing Cordial in severe cases of Bowel Complaints in children and delicate females, I have been much pleased with its effects. I consider it a valuable medicine in all cases, in which it may be advisable to avoid the use of anodyne, and particularly for family use, as it is perfectly safe.

W. T. WRAGG, M. D.

CHARLESTON. S. C.. 1868.

I certify that I have most successfully used Rosselly's Soothing Cordial in the Summer Complaints of infants. He has fully exhibited the ingredients of his remedy, and the tedious method of preparation. I recognize the prescription—containing no anodyne whatever—as a most safe and efficacious one in bowel affections of children.

When much pain or restlesspess attends the affections of the safe of when much pain or restlessness attends the affection, doses of Paregoric can be added to the prescribed doses of the Cordial according to the age of the patient. The compound, though more often, acts in an efficient manner without any ad-often, acts in an emcient manner.

In the Diarrhea of the aged, in increased doses, it is of great value as a remedy; never disagreeing with the stomach—increasing appetite, improving digestion, and acting as a slow but emcient astringent agent.

W. M. FITCH, M. D.

CHARLESTON, S. C., 1868.

Dear Sir—I have used your Southing Cordial for Diarrhosa in teething children, and find it a very excellent preparation. It has a great advantage over most preparations of the kind in containing no Chalman or Naraction. no Oplum or Narcotic.

When these are required they can be added in T. L. OGIER, M. D.

MOUNT PLEASANT, S. C., 1868.

Mr. J. B. Russell:

DEAR SIR—I have used your Soothing Cordial for children extensively in my practice, and most cheerfully testify to its merits. I have found it, without an exception, to accomplish all it claims, and consider it superior to anything in use for children. its freedom from anodyne of any kind recommends it as a perfectly safe preparation in the hands of mothers and inexperienced nurses.

Very respectfully, &c.. D. R. WILLIAMS, M. D.
